

Plainview Journalist Draws On Lifetime Experiences In New Book

Drawing on his diverse life experiences as a journalist, sports broadcaster, basketball magazine publisher, sports official and active Christian layman and community member, former Plainview Daily Herald editor Danny Andrews has written a 442-page book of some 250 stories called Things I Have Saw and Did.

The title is derived from a grammatically-challenged sports-officiating friend and the subtitle, "50 Years of Thinking Out Loud," from the name of Andrews' column at The Herald and his musings as alumni director at Wayland Baptist University, Plainview.

Among the subjects of his stories are his family; longtime friends and chance encounters with celebrities; playing, officiating, reporting on and broadcasting sports; interesting newspaper colleagues and experiences; faith, church and mission ventures; and more.

Hart residents mentioned in the book are current resident Richard Entrekin and former residents, Bob Phillips and Jimmie Chennault (for whom the title is credited); and the late Mike Wall, former reporter and news editor of The Plainview Daily Herald and publisher-editor of The Hart Beat and The Kress Chronicle. Coach/teacher Carl Irlbeck, who was employed at Hart ISD for a number of years, is also a subject.

Andrews brings his subjects to life with vivid detail, humor and pathos, hoping to foster in readers, memories of their own similar experiences, to take them vicariously to meet with presidents in the White House, confront cantankerous newspaper readers, share humorous glimpses of sports officiating and broadcasting, relate tales that prove this is a small world after all and, perhaps, encourage their own faith journey.

Andrews is a member of the Panhandle Press Hall of Fame,
